Chapter 1 by Ton-Ton

She tied her hair back, it always got in the way of her seeing the bruises her "family" had placed there the night before. The thing which made her cry herself to sleep night, after night.

They refused to acknowledge her by name. But she remembered her name was...

Chapter 2 by Kendall

Her name was Amalie.

Her hair was dark, and soft curls caressed her head and fell past her shoulders.

She had pearl skin, never to be kissed by the light of day.

Her body was carved of marble, as delicate as glass, and as prized as the statue of David.

She lived behind me, just over the wall, a mysterious thing she was. I would see her in the summer, and miss her in the winter. On only the rarest of occasions would her big grey eyes meet mine, that of a darker shade, for a single second of bliss.

I have never heard the music escape the walls of her room. I have never been able to fathom the kind of literature she would read. I have never been able to lay my eyes upon a finished painting.

But I loved her. Amalie.

No matter how mysterious she seemed to me, no matter how quickly she could disappear from sight, no matter how long I would have to wait to hear her voice... I loved her.

Chapter 3 by Kylie Fraser

And I will continue to love her. As long as my soul yearned for her snow-white skin, I will love her.

And I just wish that I could talk to her. Get to see her beautiful face for more than two minutes.

I want to see the way her lips move when she speaks.

I need to see her big grey eyes and where they look to.

I must know more than just what I can see from observation.

Above all that, I wanted to help her get away from all the flaws in her family that cause her own harm.

I had to stop it.
